Eyes of Wild to Celebrate Nature's Heroes with Live Animals

TOMS RIVER - The Ocean County Library's Upper Shores branch, 112 Jersey City Ave., will celebrate unique live animals (for children 5+ with an adult) with "Eyes of the Wild" 3 p.m. Wednesday July 8.

Owned by Travis W. Gale and Wallaby Tales, the show takes children through an hour long educational journey about nature's superheroes. This Jersey based traveling zoo incorporates its show with humor, entertainment, and wildlife such as chinchillas, arctic foxes and hedgehogs.

Gale started his wildlife rescue and education facility fifteen years ago after a career as both a field biologist and a Special Education/Science/ESL instructor for the Plumsted Township School District. He has a passion for rescuing animals and educating children.

The program is sponsored by the Friends of the Upper Shores branch. It is free and open to the public but registration is required. To register telephone the branch (732-793-3996) or go to the library website: www.theoceancountylibrary.org .
